模拟试题 Test Two Section Use of English Directions: Read the following text. Choose the best word(s) for each numbered blank and mark [ A ], [ B ], [ C ] or [ D ] on Answer Sheet 1. (10 points) Generally speaking, a British is widely regarded as a quiet, shy and conservative person who is <sup>1</sup> only among those with whom he is acquainted. When a stranger is at present, he often seems nervous, <sup>2</sup> embarrassed. You have to take a commuter train any morning or evening to <sup>3</sup> the truth of this. Serious-looking businessmen and women sit reading their newspapers or dozing in a corner. Hardly anybody talks, since to do so would be considered quite offensive. <sup>4</sup>, there is an unwritten but clearly understood code of behavior which, <sup>5</sup> broken, makes the offender immediately the object of <sup>6</sup>. It has been known as a fact that the British has a <sup>7</sup> for the discussion of their weather and that, if given a chance, he will talk about it <sup>8</sup>. Some people argue that it is because the British weather seldom <sup>9</sup> forecast and hence becomes a source of interest and <sup>10</sup> to everyone. This may be so. <sup>11</sup> a British cannot have much <sup>12</sup> in the weathermen, who, after promising fine, sunny weather for the following day, are often proved wrong <sup>13</sup> a cloud over the Atlantic brings rainy weather to all districts! The man in the street seems to be as accurate or as inaccurate as the weathermen in his <sup>14</sup>. Foreigners may be surprised at the number of references <sup>15</sup> weather that the British make to each other in the course of a single day. Very often conversational greetings are 16 by comments on the weather. “ Nice day, isn ’ t it? ” “ Beautiful! ” may well be heard instead of “ Good morning, how are you? ” 17 the foreigner may consider this exaggerated and comic, it is worthwhile pointing out that it could be used to his advantage. 18 he wants to start a conversation with a British but is19 to know where to begin, he could do well to mention the state of the weather. It is a safe subject which will20 an answer from even the most reserved of the British.来源 : www.examda.com
