英文：Intel sees slowdown in growth for PCs Intel yesterday forecast slowing growth for the personal computer industry this year and reported that several million of its microprocessors had piled up at its customers over the past two quarters. In an admission that Intel ' s execution was as much a problem as industry conditions, Paul Otellini, chief executive, told an analysts ' meeting in New York that work was under way to “ restructure, repurpose and resize ” the company to set its course for the next few years. Mr Otellini had announced a “ wholesale look ” at the world ' s biggest chipmaker at its quarterly results presentation last week, when Intel announced profits had fallen by a third.
